

I have been a Quixtar IBO since it's inception in September 1999.

Since that time, I have experienced a series of family crisis, including the tragic death of a son. Although this has made it difficult to focus on business, my Quixtar associates continue to be a major source of comfort and support.

I feel that several components in your proposal would severely impede my progress toward Platinum. These are:

1. Providing a list of local IBOs would handicap me and others by giving prospects the opportunity to register with someone on the list who is currently more advanced than I. Currently, this business offers a level playing field. Your proposal would change that to – “the rich get richer” and from MY efforts. This list would be an invasion of privacy for those IBOs listed. We strongly encourage prospects to join us at group meetings where IBOs at all levels are available for questions, concerns. We invite discourse.
2. Disclosing personal income would be an invasion of privacy. Given my personal situations it could influence them to register with another IBO or not at all. My income is not an indication of what THEY could accomplish. Would ANYONE be attracted to a business that requires them to divulge their personal earnings?! We provide prospects with information provided by Quixtar stating potential earnings and average IBO earnings.
3. Requiring a 7-day waiting period would slow down the pace of registering IBOs plus force me to spend unproductive time counting days. I've heard many successful business people attest to the importance of momentum in building a business. This would eliminate momentum.
4. Providing a list of lawsuits focuses on negative issues and encourages more negativism. We take pride in maintaining a positive and open atmosphere where anyone can voice their questions, share ups and downs and still be accepted. Personally, I need that.
